Welcome Message

NanoWorld Journal takes great pleasure in inviting you to be a part of the 4th edition of NanoWorld Conference (NWC) during March 04-06, 2019 in Paris, France. NWC provides high quality current reports of scientific progress and best practices in the field of Nanotechnology through its invited presentations, submitted oral abstracts and posters presentations. The conference is designed to encourage the exchange of ideas across a broad range of disciplines to make a high-level scientific event that will be of great value. The program will address the key sectors from which depends the human progress and survival, with the aims to enhance worldwide cooperation in research and development and to help to overcome the problems, too frequently underestimated and growing from energy to environment and natural disasters, from cancer to hardware and space. NWC covers five major sectors, four are strictly scientific and technological being energy, cancer, hardware and environment, and one very broad named society open instead to the needed political, industrial and social contributions to the solution of the problems. The three-day conference will feature important presentations by a wide range of expert speakers, decision and policy makers, scientific leaders from around the world who will assemble in Paris with the common objective of engaging to expand and improve global aspects of nanotechnology in all the before mentioned sectors. With the theme “Useful Science and Technology for a Just World”, NWC Conference promises to gather the leaders from all across the globe to discuss the major advancements and challenges in the nanoscience for the better future of world. We look forward to welcoming participants from all over the world to the sparkling city of Paris and are highly optimistic of making this event a cherishable experience for our participants and collaborators. Best Wishes Scientific and Organizing Committee, NanoWorld Conference -2019.
