Sponsorship?

Sponsorships are the financial or in-kind support of activities. Businesses often sponsor events, trade shows, groups, or charity causes to reach specific business goals and increase their competitive advantage.

Though sponsorship is a form of marketing, it is different from advertising, which attempts to persuade customers to make purchases by sharing specific messages about a product or company.

Sponsorships, on the other hand, don't directly promote your company or products. Instead, your company pays to support a specific event that your customers care about. Your business is then associated with the event by customers, attendees, and the media.

In all its forms, sponsorships allow you to reach targeted niche markets without the expense and uncertainty associated with traditional advertising. Strategic sponsorships can help your business meet multiple marketing goals at once.

9 Marketing Benefits of Sponsorship

1. Shape consumer attitudes
2. Build brand awareness
3. Drive sales
4. Increase reach
5. Generate media exposure
6. Differentiate yourself from competitors
7. Take on a "corporate citizen" role
8. Generate new leads
9. Enhance business, consumer, and VIP relationship
